To Whom It May Concern:

Nearly two years ago, while we were planning the 2005 Florida Bankers Association annual convention, my wife called me to say that she had found just the right group to be the main entertainment at the gala which closes our convention. She had just seen The BeatGirls perform on The Today Show and learned that they were the entertainment for Sports Illustrated's Olympic parties in Greece.

By the time I got home, she had located them on the Internet where we were able to watch a performance clip. It was obvious they were a very talented, high energy group that could entertain audiences of any age. We had decided the group we wanted should be entertaining to those that chose not to dance, yet provide music for those that did. The BeatGirls could certainly do that! We were fortunate to be able to book them at a reasonable rate and were very pleased with their performance.

The over 700 bankers attending the convention were delighted and pleased with the evening's entertainment. They especially liked the variety of songs that were sung and the way the performers interacted with them. I have no reservation in recommending them to any organization looking for a fun-filled event.

Sincerely
